Meeting your needs without forgetting the environment's.

At Sherwin-Williams, we believe that providing a selection of ecologically friendly floorcovering solutions is more than just our job, it's our responsibility. As the demand for "green" products grows, so do our sustainable offerings. Along with ultra-durable floors that do not need to be replaced frequently, we offer a selection of floorcoverings that meet high environmental standards and stringent LEED qualification requirements. And we do it without sacrificing availability, durability or your budget.

A variety of solutions.

We are proud to offer flooring from some of the best brands in the business – flooring companies that are committed to sustainability, recycling, using renewable resources or sourcing local materials. Many of these companies offer floorcoverings that are made from recycled or low-emitting materials and are compliant with indoor air quality standards. We also provide a wide variety of products featuring the latest in stain resistant technologies and anti-microbial properties that inhibit mildew growth.

We set the bar higher.

At Sherwin-Williams, we lead the industry in implementing the best practices in our formulation, manufacturing and distribution processes. We take great pride in our ongoing initiative to offer environmentally preferable solutions in the coatings and products we manufacture, as well as in the decorative products we offer. Through our partnerships with major floorcovering companies, many of our floorcovering centers will even take your old carpet and padding and send it to be recycled.
